Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

Harry Bridges of Australia is heralded as a prospective visitor and speaker in Grass Valley on July 11. On the same date but not bracketed in the same announcement, Culbert Olson, candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket was also scheduled to deliver an oration, but late advices state he is not coming. Of the two we consider that Olson, heir to Sinclair Lewis' "production-for-use" doctrine and wild-eyed schemes for wrecking California, is by far the greatest threat to the peace and orderly development of this state.

Olson has been among the foremost proponents of the free-Mooney movement. He evinces no respect for the decision of four governors, who weighed all the evidence for and against Mooney and refused to give this ten-times murderer either a pardon or commutation of his life sentence. He flouts the Supreme Court of California, which has examined all the circumstances that attended the conviction and sentencing of Mooney, and has denied him any relief from his "durance vile." The question of Mooney's conviction and imprisonment, has at length reached the United States Supreme Court and in due time we shall hear its decision. But in the meantime Mooney will continue to be bait in one of the most profitable rackets in the United States.

The racket has both political and pecuniary phases. Olson will probably make the freedom of Mooney one of his platform planks, that is to say, in those of his talks before the radicals of Los Angeles and San Francisco. That is one of the political phases. Even Congressmen as far away as Montana are making the freedom of this cold-blooded murderer an issue in their campaigns. The record of Mooney, the facts, mean nothing.

It is the pecuniary angle to the Mooney propaganda that is particularly vicious; the lawyers, the red press, and the various agencies that collect money for pushing the campaign to set at large this red-handed dynamiter are merely bloodsuckers taking the pennies and dimes of a large section of what Mr. Roosevelt loves to designate as the underprivileged. If by any chance or loophole in the quirks of the law, Mooney should get his liberty, a criminal group of human horse leeches would suddenly find themselves with out a host. Of course, there is always McNamara, the chap who blew up the Los Angeles Times building, and killed twenty innocent persons. But the trouble with that felon is that he confessed in open court to the crime. As a communist hero he has besmeared his own escrutcheon, and it would really require a special kind of ballyhoo to wring dimes and the nickels out of the deluded for a drive to release McNamara.

Harry Bridges, who left Australia and has never been properly thanked by his grateful countrymen, and Olson, demagogue candidate for the Governor's office and a New Deal for California, form a unique combination of talent. To Harry Bridges San Francisco can attribute the internecine war of labor against labor, and incidentally the loss of many millions of dollars in shipping and trade, the antagonism of all farmers in California and threats of an agricultural boycott. California can thank Ma Perkins, Secretary of Labor under the New Deal, for giving petticoat shelter to this communist, protecting him from explusion from the United States, as a very undesirable alien. Incidentally there are 1200 aliens in California penitentiaries, which the Prison Board would like to deport at the end of their terms, but Ma Perkins prefers to keep these blacklegs in California, and very reluctantly permits any criminal alien to be deported from any state, anytime.

For Mr. Bridges' rise to national notoriety as Number 2 Peace disturber of labor relations (John L. Lewis is No. 1) in the United States, we have to thank President Roosevelt. For when CIO followers wage war on peace officers and use the name of President Roosevelt as a battle cry, as they did in their recent fracas in Nevada county, only one conclusion can be drawn. But we suspect that Olson will not be able to get the Rooseveltian cache upon his candidacy. Olson, Upton Sinclair's political heir, is a little bit too ultra for open New Deal approval. Sinclair, despite what he declared was an outright promise made at Hyde Park, at long last failed to obtain the New Deal O. K. and we doubt that Olson will be more successful.

This precious pair, even if appearing together as missionaries for communism, could hardly make an impression in Nevada County. Olson wisely chooses not to come. He does not have to come here to enlist CIO suppodt. He will get that if he never lifts a hand in oratorical gesture. Bridges is coming undoubtedly with the idea of converting an American community to Australian red radicalism. He will be disappointed. Nevada County came to a decision some months ago and is not likely to be moved by the fervid cockney accents of a foreign communist. He may, or may not wring money enough out of the little group of faithful CIO henchmen here to bail out the five in the county jail, convicted of rioting, pending a prososed appeal, but this too is extremely doubtful.

Clampers to Meet With Chamber and Aid in Fiesta Fourth

The ancient and mystic order of E Clampus Vitus will meet with the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow (Tuesday) night in the city hall. The Hewgag sounded by the Noble Grand Musician this evening will call every Important Member together for tomorrow evening to hear the Noble Grand Humbug invoke St. Vitus' blessing upon Nevada City and Grass Valley's three day Mexican fiesta birthday party.

The Clampers, the Rotary Club, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Native Sons and Daughters, and a host of unaffiliated citizens are bending all energies to make this Fourth memorable in the annals of county celebrations.

Last minute and concluding plans are to be discussed. The Clampers are to have entire charge of Armory Hall during Saturday, Sunday and Monday. This includes the amusement features, refreshments, floor show and dancing.

The big benefit program for the past week end went over very nicely and will be quite a material help in defraying the expense of the coming celebration.

While Saturday night at the big Eldorado was quite enthusiastic it was a little late in starting. So many other events were taking place the same evening. It got off to a nice start about 10 o'clock and things were quite lively from then on until closing time.

The program put on by the Civic Club in Pioneers Park drew a good sized crowd before the afternoon wore off and mostly a young people's group took part in the events. Charles Thomas, Jr., and "Babe" Santinelli won the greased pig contest.

A division of the parade for next Monday has been given over to floats for each of twenty streets, and a float for each of the seven hills on which the city is built.

About 20 floats have been lined up and many more have been arranged for. A portion of the floats are Cub Scouts, Lace House, garden scene with Miss Jane Bennett, in it; Tahoe Sugar Pine company, Parent Teacher association, Banner Mt. Post V. F. W., Auxiliary; Tahoe National Forest, four floats representing four different forest divisions; Kopps Bakery; R. J. Berggren. In the streets division there are Bridge street, Factory street, Park avenue, Washington street, Church street, Boulder street. A new idea has been brought forth in Selby's Flat, a ghost town which was a town before Nevada City.

Grass Valley held a meeting in the last few days, and some splendid floats are expected to be entered from that city.

FLOSSIE ANGOVE WILL BE FIESTA FOURTH QUEEN

Six hundred thousand votes ahead of the next in the running for the queen of the Fourth Festival were received by Flossie Angove, who totaled 1,796,223 votes. June Hawke came second with 1,102,365.

Everyone seems pleased, Flossie Angove has been a great favorite with both the young and old of Nevada City and she will be a most charming queen. Her sweet gracious manner and popularity are the very attributes needed in a festival queen. The final vote count was made Saturday night and the Fourth of July committee worked till long past midnight making the count.

Miss Angove as queen will be the recipient of a $50 Elgin wrist watch donated by R. J. Berggren Nevada City jeweler.

TROUT LIMITS

Frank Ghidotti, local sportsman is all smiles these days. He has brought in his third limit of splendid trout in the last few days. With Dick Lane Thursday two fine limits of 17 trout were caught in Weaver Lake each a limit and one fish extra. The high waters have subsided and the new shiny motor fishing boat was brought out of dry dock and put to good use.

MERRY CROWD ENJOYS POOL

There was an attendance at the municipal pool in Pioneers Park yesterday of 325, according to Merle Gray, life guard, who states that this represents the peak day in this past two years of managing the pool. Of this number fully 300 were children for whom no admission is charged.

Gray reports that beginning today he will give free swimming lessons to boys and girls for one week. Today's enrollment in these classes for beginners, intermediates and advanced pupils, numbers 76 girls and 84 boys.

At times yesterday the pool fairly boiled with youngsters, some of whom, because of their ease in acrobatic stunts in the water rival the fish.

Misses Helen Chapman, Margaret Rector and Frances Davey left Sunday to attend summer session of schools in Berkeley. Miss Chapman and Miss Davey are staying at International House.

MILLION SET ASIDE TO BEGIN NARROWS DAM

A telegram received by The Nevada City Nugget Saturday afternoon and later read at a meeting of the board of directors of the California Hydraulic Miners Association was interpreted as definitely settling an early date for construction work on the Narrows control dam, opposite Mooney Flat, as well as furthering construction at the North Fork and Ruck-a-Chucky sites on the Americans.

The telegram stated that on Friday the sum of one million dollars was allocated by the Secretary of War specifically to the Narrows project, making the total allocation on the three projects $2,500,000.

OBJECTIVES OBTAINED

The board expressed unbounded satisfaction with the progress of the movement for resmuption of hydraulic mining under control conditions and made tentative plans for meeting of the membership and citizens later in the summer to be addressed by Representative Englebright, as well as members of the California Debris Commission. A regular meeting of the association was set for Auburn on Saturday, July 9, at which time it was expected that the president of the association, George W. Hallock, will have returned from the east.

The meeting was attended by members of the contracting firm of A. Tiechert and Son, contractors for the Northfork construction. They reported that a clause in the contract provides that cement must "cool" for 96 hours before being stripped, whereas 48 hours would be ample for construction of that type. The requirement, it appears was carried forward from the heavy construction on the Boulder and Grand Coulee projects where conditions are vastly different.

Unless modification can be secured the requirement may extend basic construction into the 1939 flood season.

The text of the Englebright telegram follows:

ENGELBRIGHT'S WIRE

"Today my bill giving Secretary of War authority to enter into contracts to sell water and oulet facilities from hydraulic mining debris storage dams became law. The bill provides the Secretary of War can make contracts for use of stored water in control dams for domestic, irrigation and power development purposes. It also provides that monies received from such contracts shall be deposited to the crdeit of the reservoir project from which water is supplied and the total capital cost of said reservoir which is to be repaid by tax on hydraulic mining operations.

"The allocation by the Secretary of War of one million dollars to start construction of the Narrows dam project was made yesterday. This makes a total of $2,500,000 that has been allocated to start work on the Northfork, Ruck-a-Chucky and Narrows projects. Plans for further contracts on the three propects are being rushed by the Board of Engineers.

"I am very happy, indeed, to have been able to bring about the above accomplishment."

HARRY L. ENGLEBRIGHT, M. C.

GWIN TO REPORT TO ROTARY CLUB

The Rotary club at luncheon next Thursday will hear a report from the club's delegate, Clyde Gwin, on the International Rotary convention in San Francisco which was concluded last Friday. Gwin attended many of the sectional and most of the plenary sessions of the 10,000 delegates who came from 65 countries to meet in San Francisco. Next year's convention city will be Chicago.

The many friends of Henry Clark, employee of the Murchie mine will be glad to knew that at last reports he is improving at the Landis hospital where he was taken last week for special treament with pneumonia.

Few Changes Made By Miners and Operators

The agrreement with between the Mine Workers Protective League and mine operators of the Nevada City-Grass Valley district was ratified yesterday morning by the league. The new agreement runs for 18 months.

There are very few changes in the agreement from that of last year. Wage scales are practically unchanged. With the exception of one or two dissenters, the agreement was unanimously approved at the mass meeting.

As in years past it will be noted that this agreement was reached without work stoppage, without blustering, without threatts of rupturing harmonious relations by either party to the agreement. No labor racketeer profits from the agreement signed between the mine operators and Nevada County's independent miners union. There are no rich pickin's for some eastern labor czar. Home owning miners and citizens of this county have again, as they have for the past twenty years, proved their ability to look after their own business without interference or dominance by hired agitators and bosses.

Furthermore the scale of wages is higher than that in any other mining camp in the United States, higher, that is, in average annual earnings. Boom camps, and occasionally copper camps pay more for a brief period. But for the miner that wants to own his own home, rear a family and send his children to good schools live in a quiet, progressive community without labor wars and disturbances, Nevada County offers more than any other mining district in the United States.

One notable change in the working agreement was made. All labor pertaining to the mining industry was classified and a minimum scale for each classification was agreed upon. In many cases, however, mine workers are receiving considerably more than this minimum. Also agreed upon was time and a half for over time, and one additional holiday with pay during the year.

The agreement affects all miners working in the Empire-Star and Pennsylvania, the Golden Center, Spring Hill and Norambagua, the Murchie, Zeibright and Arctic mines.

The contract between the League and the mine operators follows:

Wage scale and working agreement entered into June —, 1939, between —— hereinafter called the Operator and Mine Workers Protective League of Nevada County, California, hereinafter called the League.

1. This agreement shall be in force from July 1st, 1938, to December 31st, 1939. If either party to this agreement desires a change in wages or working conditions at the expiration of said agreement, written notice of such desire shall be given at least 30 days prior to such expiration provided, that if the price of gold is changed to a figure above or below $35.00 per ounce during said period either party may confer with the other with respect to any changes to the wage scale which said party may deem equitable under the circumstances.

2. Whenever either party shall have given such thirty days notice, the Operator and a Committee of five League members shall immediately go into conference to negotiate a new agreement within the month. In the event that a new agreement cannot be achieved within the thirty days, then this instrument may be declared null and void.

3. If no notice is given by either of the contracting parties, then it is understood that the existing agreement shall continue annually in force until such notice is given.

4. The Operator agrees to recognize the League as the sole collective bargaining agency for all employees of the Operator who are or may become members of the League during the life of this agreement in all matters relative to employment at the properties of this Operator which may come up for discussion and negotiation, and further agrees not to recognize or deal with any other labor organization as bargaining agency for any of its employees unless required so to do by lawful order of any Federal or State agency having jurisdiction over Operator; provided, that any individual employee or a group of employees of Operator shall have the right at any time to present grievances to Operator, and Operator may discuss and adjust such individual grievances with said employee of employees presenting them.

5. The Operator agrees that no discrimination shall be shown against any Committee or representative of the League who may be appointed by the League to contact employees in the matter of becoming League members; provided that such Committee or representative shall not violate or interfere with Operator's operating rule and regulations.

6. After an injury has been sustained by an employees, a release signed by the attending doctor is all that shall be necessary to entitle the injured to return to work.

7. Minimum wages paid by Operator at the——— mine shall be governed by the minimum wage schedule attached hereto. It is understood and agreed that such wages are based on an hourly rate of an eight hour day and, except for men regularly employed on a seven day basis, on a six day week and that any increase or decrease in hours of labor which may be imposed by law or otherwise will correspondingly affect the weekly wages payable hereunder. If the wages of any employee should be reduced below the amount he is now receiving the employee or the grievances committee of the League may confer with the Operator's Manager, Assistant Manager or Superintendent as to whether such reduction is justified.

8. Effective September 1, 1938, any employee who is required to work more than forty eight hours per week shall receive one and one-half times his standard rate of compensation for all hours in excess of the said maximum of forty-eight hours per week. Provided, however, that overtime rates will not apply to excess hours required by the voluntary absence of an employee engaged on a three-shift job, or to work of an emergency nature wherein the safety or employees or of the property is involved, or to hours not in excess of fifty six hours per week worked by employees engaged on a seven day basis.

9. The following days shall be declared holidays and only routine work allowed: July 4h; League Picnic; Labor Day; Armistice Day and Christmas Day.

10. Any employee temporarily placed in charge of three or more men for a piece of work shall be given a higher rate of pay during the performance of such work.

11. Nothing in this agreement is intended to violate any state or Federal statute which is now or may be hereafter enacted. If any State or Federal law shall make any clause of this agreement unlawful and subject either party hereto to penalties if it is carried out, then any time after such law takes effect, the party to whom such penalty would apply may at its option declare the agreement void, and negotiaions may then be opened for a new agreement conforming with such law.

Perilous Peaks

The current year is less than helf gone, but already death has claimed 29 victims of crashes on scheduled airline runs. Repartment of Commerce reports show annual fatalities in commecrial aviation have doubled since 1935. Significance of these figures impressed the nation a few days ago when a lone searcher among the lofty mountain peaks surmouting Yosemite Valley found the shattered remnants of a once majestic passenger plane, with the broken bodies of nine men and women, scattered about the icy slopes.

In California, leading the world in aviation industry, a pertinent question is clamoring for answer: why do airpliners, designed and built to fly comfortably and safeely at altitudes up to perhaps 25,000 feet, crash into the sides of 10,000 foot mountains? Recent investigations of crashes have shown no mechanical faults. One is forced to the conviction, then, that pilots deliberately have dropped to lower altitudes, with visibility virtually zero, in order to effect quick l andings and maintain schedules.

Aviation is advancing and will continue to advance. Pacific Coast builders are turning out bigger and better planes. Air travel, despite the spectacular tragedies, is gaining in volume. But something should be done about these apparently unwarranted crashes. In bad weather, with visibility poor, we'd think the smart thing to do would be to stay at a safely high altitude until actually over the airport. It might cost a little in the way of time, but at least the passengers would reach their destinations intact.—Contributed.

THIS AND THAT

By ROY GRIFFITH DEETER

This week's query: We wonder if any of you are familiar with the writings of Walter Stewart?. We are ashamed to admit we just never heard of him—we say ashamed advisedly, because in the June 25 issue of Colliers he had a story called Final Fight—and anyone who can write as Mr. Stewart does, with that illusive quality which simply will not let you forget the story, is a great writer. We shall keep our eyes sharply peeled for any further work of his. And while we are speaking of Colliers, we have to admit our present passion in the line of ilustrators is Jaro Fabry, we simply adore his wide mouthed, tilted nosed, bold limbed gals and boys. We have been studying his style rather closely for some time, and we have come to the conclusion he gets most of his effect, through the extremely clever use of light and shade ,and also from the simplicity of his sweeping lines—the whole style is bold and modern. but gosh how we like it!

This week's laugh: The man we know of who fed his chickens on buttered pop corn to save basting a chicken when he cooked it, and also so he could fry eggs without greasing the pan—and this is a true one folks! "Basted hens, on the hoof—buttered eggs in the nest"—pretty good slogan, or don't you?

Personalities: Charlie Ninnis, out of bed for a few hours, and looking so very much better.

Saturday night we attended the Peace Officers dance at Olympia. It really was a swell elegant affair. The park was cool, the floor excellent and the Banta music all that could be desired. There was a big crowd there and everyone seemed to be having a grand time.

And speaking of peace officers, we understand that Saturday the Nevada County Peace Officers Association had a shoot with the Placerville ditto, ditto, ditto, and the Nevada County boys won by some 46 points, are we delighted. There was a competitive shoot later between Captain LaPorte, Captain Blake and Captain Willard, wherein our Captain Joe, dashed off with the honors. Pretty good shots, all of these Nevada County boys, we'd say!

Las Sunday we did not roam far from home. We dashed up to Monte Vista Inn for dinner and got back to Nevada City in time to go to the Eldorado and watch Prince and Black Gold. Captain Franke allowed us to help in the presentation of these lovely dogs, and were we all puffed up or something! Speaking of dogs we also met Jack Vaughn owner of that gorgeous dog, great granddaughter of Rin-Tin-Tin, Princess Von Etta, whom you will all remember seeing in the film Sequoia. They are visiting in Nevada City, en route to Reno. Princess Von Etta is a different type of German shepherd to Prince and Black Gold, and is also differently trained, but nevertheless just as friendly, and intelligent. We always were hipped on dogs, and so we will say to you, cheerio, everybody.

FRED GARRISON HEADS EPWORTH DRAMA CLUB

The Epworth League drama club held a special meeting Thursday evening last and elected officers for the coming year. Fred Garrison was elected president. Miss Jean Hawkins, Epworth League counselor, acted as temporary chairman until the officers were elected. Miss Sylvia Ronning was elected as secretary and Phil Angove as stage manager.

The plans of the club are to create an interest for the younger folks of the community during the summer and to provide means of raising money for the coming institute at Monte Toyon in August. At first the group will put on short skits and later will work into lengthy dramas and biblical subjects. The club is open to all who wish to belong, whether member of the Nevada City Epworth League or not.

The time for the next meeting wil be announced later. Miss Hawkins entertained those attending after the meeting with refreshments and games were played.

OTT BUILDING REMODELED

The remodeled business building of E. J. N. Ott makes a fine appearance with its rich coat of cream and brown paint. Carpenters renewed the porch in front of the Ott Assay office, and in front of Miss Elma Heckers apartment over the fire house. The stucco finish on the front of the big building, which covers about a half block, gives a Spanish effect.

TOM COAN INJURES LEG

Thomas Coan, local mining man, was able to be down town for the first time Friday having suffered a severely injured leg when he fell against heavy timbers. He bruised the bone just below the knee cap on his right leg and walked with a cane. Mr. Coan was confined to his bed three or four days with the injury.

A Word Of Praise

H. M. L. Jr.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, once wrote that in any conversation between Thomas and John, there were six persons to be considered, namely: 1) the real Thomas; 2) Thomas as he imagined himself to be; 3) Thomas as John saw him; and the real John, John's ideal of John and Thomas' ideal John. Thus it is that the most successful relationship between John and Thomas would not be between the real John and the real Thomas but between John as he sees himself and Thomas as he sees himself. In other words, if in dealing with another person, we strive to understand him as he imagines himself to be, we are on the road to a very successful relationship.

To appreciate another person's estimate of himself, it is necessary to know our own mental picture of him, exaggerate the good traits and minimize the importance of the bad ones. Here it is that we see how harmoniously a word of praise to Thomas fits in with Thomas's estimate of his character. "Thomas," you say "I admire your energy: and I wish I were as industrious as you are." Thinks Thomas to himself: "How true! What excellent perception this fellow has. He is a kindred spirit. I like him." Already your relationship with Thomas has improved one hundred per cent.

Were you on the other hand to say to Thomas as that there was some slight flaw or any kind in his character or actions, he, unless possessing a rare breadth of view, would immediately look at you with suspicion. "A flaw indeed," he would think, "who is this imperetinent chap to come finding flaws in me?" Your stock with him sinks, for he views you as a stupid pessimist with far too little perspicacity to recognize the sterling qualities that he posses in his opinion of himself.

A word of praise to a normal person is not actually that, but merely an intelligent statement about his personality as he sees it. It fits in with his set of concepts and, as we said before, most harmoniously.

Praise has a rightness to the receiver that gives him a rosy glow and greatly enhances his opinion of of the rare and intelligent chap, whom, he feels, understands his true, and rather excellent self.

We are very prone to neglect this powerful social implement of praise. Our attitude toward character and action of those about us is habitually pessimistic and critical. Good traits and acts are accepted as commonplace and go unnoticed. But let error show its face from time to time and no matter how fleeting its appearance, it is the target for a flurry of critical arrows.

It is not a form of Pollyannism that is indicated here as a method to smooth some of the ruffled feathers of daily relationships; what would be helpful is simply a balanced outlook, one which leans away from the constant over-emphasis on weakness and error, and toward an understanding of the great warming power of praise. Surely there is as much good as bad in the world. But who would know it whose only form of information was expressed commentary, written and oral? It is by reading and listening that we learn the ills of the world. Chiefly by experience are we acquainted with good things.

Now with the worlds ills seemingly multiplying, it is necessary for mental health to inject a dose of the optimistic outlook into all our views. The habit of seeing the good in things and people is one that carries with it, besides peace of mind, a great social power. The social power of praise, coupled with the appreciation of another's excellent traits cannot be under-estimated. It makes for great warmth and friendliness in our daily relationships.

GOLDFIELD CONS. TAKES OVER SAN JUAN GRAVELS

In March the Goldfields Consolidated, reported to be connected with San Juan Gold Mining company, took over several thousand acres of ground in the San Juan area. The vast teeritory starts at Moores Flat and extends to Smartville near the Narrows dam. The old Morton property and River Mines at North San Jaun are in the transaction. Ross F. Taylor, engineer of Downieville, is supervising assessment work on the claims. Before the property can be placed on an operating basis a great deal of work remains to be done. The company is planning to prospect the ground thoroughly before starting work. The Goldfields Consolidated is a Nevada state company.

GREAT FOSSIL BED IS FOUND CONTRA COSTA

BERKELEY, June 27.—One of the nation's greatest fossil beds, ranking in importance with that of the Ranch LaBreat in southern California, is being worked by the University of California in Contra Costa county. It is revealed through the issuance of a publication on fossil dogs of the region by the University's Museum of Paleontology. As far as can be determined, all of the deposits are of animals, mammals and birds, which existed in the Lower Pliocene period, between three and four million years ago.

The fossil bed represents an ancient water hole or valley water course to which the early creatures came to drink—and to die. No other reason is known for the great accumulation of specimens at this one spot. The fossils aremuch more ancient than those of the La Brea pits, but not nearly as well preserved. The fossil dog described in the Museum's publication is the most primitive of this type ye found, a short-jawed type, with bone crunching teeth, similar to those of a hyena and about the size of a German shepherd, but more heavily built. It was a branch of the family three of the dogs and became extinct.

Other known types, in the region are the long-jawed mastodon, which are abundant, two kinds of camels, one of which was much taller than a modern camel, small antelopes, measuring about three feet in height three kinds of hyena-like dogs, and a number of other animals. There are 19 types accounted for thus far, a good representation of the large mammals of that time on this part of the continent.

So important is thediscovery considered that a few of the most interesting specimens are being restored for a diorama to be displayed at the Golden Gate International Exposition in 1939. Work on this diorama is now under way.

As the deposit is on private property, its location has not been announced by the University. The layer averages two feet in thickness, much of it composed of the fossil bones. It runs along the surface for at least 100 feet and then goes down to an unknown depth. Many of the bones are flattened and crushed, due to their being covered by thousands of feet of accumulating sediments, which were later forcibly folded so that the fossil beds now stand on end. The information concerning the field was made known by King A. Richley research assistant in paleontology. The discovery is credited to Dr. B. L. Clark, associate professor of paleontology.

Mrs. M. S. Matthews of Pasadena is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Frank Crampton at the beautiful Crampton home on Piety Hill in this city.
